

Christine Gillison
Safety Consultant, VRSA

Christine Gillison joined the Virginia Risk Sharing Association (VRSA) as a safety consultant in 2021. In her role, she partners with municipalities to assist them in strengthening their safety programs, reduce risk, and build proactive safety cultures.

Prior to joining VRSA, Gillison spent five years with the Virginia Department of Labor and Industry (VOSH), supporting private industry and developing expertise in regulatory compliance, hazard recognition, and enforcement.

Gillison is a graduate of the VOSH Apprentice Program and an authorized OSHA Outreach Trainer in General Industry and Construction. She is also a Competent Person Trainer in Permit-Required Confined Space and Trenching/Excavation. As a Special Government Employee (SGE) Evaluator, she has assessed Safety and Health Management Systems across diverse industries, strengthening her ability to identify gaps, benchmark best practices, and guide sustainable program improvements.

With more than 20 years in occupational health and safety, Gillison brings a practical, real-world perspective on risk management. Her experience across public sector operations, utilities, public works, and general industry enables her to connect with municipal challenges and deliver engaging training that helps organizations move beyond compliance to build effective, lasting safety systems.
